Which Party?

The action of the Des Moines silver convention seemingly concurs with the plan of campaign suggested at the conference held in Washington last December. It is in substance to employ all available means to secure the election of true believers in the free coinage of gold and silver at the ratio of 16 to 1 to the fifty-fourth congress.

The indictment of the old parties contained in the preamble to the resolutions which were adopted, leaves no doubt that the convention looked to the people's party as the instrument through which the restoration of silver and needed reform of the finances must be effected. The declaration of the convention is that "silver was stricken down by fraud, through the gold conspirators in the old political parties, notwithstanding the direct pledges of both their national platforms to the contrary." It would be impossible to justify any other conclusion, since the people's party alone declares unequivocally for free coinage, while the authoritative influences in the democratic and republican parties are fully committed to the money-lending combination which seeks to fasten the gold standard upon the world.

The republican party organization is the main citadel of the formidable corporate bodies which control the enormous volume of congested wealth that has been wrung from the sweat of the working masses of America since the war. The money ring of East, which in this country is only the vanguard of the infinitely greater money power of Europe, absolutely owns the Republican party for all its purposes. In the test votes of the past year only four republican representatives and one republican senator east of the Mississippi has failed to respond to every demand from the usurers of Wall street. Judged by its record on the money question, that party is the confessed enemy of the South and West and has been instrumental in depreciating values in these sections to the amount of billions of dollars and reducing the bulk of such producers as have hitherto escaped the wreck to impending ruin.

The republican congressional support given silver from the trans-Mississippi states has reflected the requirements of those states and has been recorded in defiance of the republican party. Hence that party cannot be honestly credited with such support and should have no standing away from financial centers. It represents organized wealth and special privilege—forces which are impoverishing the industrial classes by piratical extortion. If the producers of the West and South would save anything from the decimating confiscations of banded plutocracy they must shun any kind of alliance with the republican party. It is the object most to be feared, since the financial conspiracy that aims at controlling the labor of the world by controlling the medium of exchange would be powerless in our country without the aid of a political organization through which to effect its nefarious purposes.

Cleveland and the democratic leaders in the North Atlantic states have surrendered the democratic party to the moneyed conspiracy absolutely and have made it as subservient to that power and as indifferent to the welfare of the masses of the people as the republican party. The treachery by which this was accomplished has caused a rebellion among the rank and file in the South and West, but since the party machinery is wholly with the administration forces there is no course left for the millions of betrayed democrats but to use the people's party organization as a means of asserting their power in the government, unless they choose to see their influence neutralized and wasted.

Silver men who are sent to the fifty-fourth congress as democrats or republicans will be political mavericks and can only give silver such hampered and incidental aid as may be expected from men who will be outlawed from their political organizations. Their work could only be effective by co-operating with the people's party representatives, and hence they should be sent there by the people's party. Clearly this was the intention of the Des Moines convention as applied to every congressional district in which it can possibly be consummated.

With both the old parties the slaves of the money power, the producing forces of the nation must array themselves under the banner of the people's party and that party must find representatives worthy of its great mission. It must cease to be compromised by driving semi-insanity, mental impotency or mad recklessness.

"The Omnivorous West."

Tom Reed was right when he called it "the omnivorous West." It is omnivorous, not from choice, but from necessity. It has been driven to omnivorousness in the matter of manufacturers, which was the occasion of Mr. Reed's epithet, by the greedy course of the East in seeking to mass and perpetuate the manufacturers of the country in that section by legislation.

Things are now beginning to come this way. The promises of anti-McKinley legislation has already shaken down some of the encrusted manufacturers of New England into the lap of the West and South. They are seeking the raw material and best markets, as they would have done years ago but for the vicious legislative barriers which the were allowed to raise.

When natural laws are observed there always is safety. The Western manufacturers have grown and prospered, while the propped up manufacturing interests of the East have wilted at the first touch of misfortune. The tanneries and shoe factories of New England, for instance, have gone under by wholesale, while the same ones in Chicago and St. Louis, with no big freight rates to pay, have waxed great and strong.

Fiat Money.

Congressman Davis, of Kansas has introduced a bill prohibiting the issue of bonds hereafter without special authorization. He primarily wishes congress to direct Mr. Carlisle to issue $50,000,000 of legal tenders "of the usual high style of art" to replace the estimated destruction and waste of United States notes since 1878. Then Mr. Carlisle is to be further directed to issue $150,000,000 of other legal tenders to replace retired national bank currency; and as fast as such national bank currency is retired Mr. Carlisle is to make it good in such fashion. Furthermore, the secretary is directed to issue annually $100,000,000 of legal tenders "in order to create and preserve an increasing and equitable volume of currency in accordance with the needs of the increasing population and volume of business of this country."

How They Vote.

The republican politicians have decided to carry on their state campaign as usual with a straddle. The convention that re-nominated Charley Curtis for congress in the third district a few days ago, adopted just that kind of a plank on the silver question. They are in favor of silver with several "ifs" and "provided" attached to it. In other words they are in favor of silver during the campaign and against it when it comes to voting in congress.

The republican party as a party is overwhelmingly opposed to silver as is shown by the following figures from their past record.

HOUSE VOTE ON THE INCOME TAX, 1893.

	Yeas.	Nays.

Some democrats and republicans were too cowardly to be present and vote either way but every populist vote in both houses was bravely recorded on the people's side of this question.

No where have the republicans ever voted a majority of their membership in favor of bi-metalism, though their platform in 1892 was held by many to mean such a position.

When the politician comes around next fall and tells you that the republican party is the party of the people and against plutocracy and the money power, have these figures where they can be shown to him.

The populists are the only people that voted solidly in the interests of the people, and in accordance with their platform. In every instance the populists in congress have voted on the right side of every question. Keep these facts fresh in the minds of the people.

Bland Bill Vetoed.

President Cleveland last Thursday sent a message to congress vetoing the seigniorage bill.

He gives as his reason the regular gold argument, claiming that silver cannot be kept on a parity with gold at the ratio of 16 to 1, or at any ratio without gold in the treasury to redeem it.

He also attacks the construction of the bill and closes with the following appeal for more bonds:

"This leads me to earnestly present the desirability of granting to the secretary of the treasury a better power than now exists to issue bonds to protect our gold reserve, when for any reason it should be necessary. Our currency is in such a confused condition and our financial affairs are apt to assume at any time so critical a position that it seems to me such a course is dictated by ordinary prudence."

"I am not insensible to the arguments in favor of coining the bullion seigniorage now in the treasury, and I believe it could be done safely and with advantage if the secretary of the treasury had the power to issue bonds at a low rate of interest under authority in substitution of that now existing and better suited to the protection of the treasury."

"I hope a way will present itself in the near future for the adjustment of our monetary affairs in such a comprehensive manner as will afford to silver its proper place in our currency, but in the meantime I am extremely solicitous that whatever action we take on this subject be such as to prevent loss and discouragement to our people at home and the destruction of confidence in our financial management abroad."
